To ensure the resilience of an increasingly diverse society, we have to take into account the strengths and the weaknesses of the different members of society. This includes their specific assets as well as their needs in times of a crisis.

The workshop “Social resilience of diverse societies” will put together people that are representing various parts of this diverse society coming from two European countries, the Netherlands and Germany. In interactive sessions we would like to elaborate on the challenges a diverse society faces in times of crises and what coping strategies exist. Building on this, we would like to highlight the opportunities that self-developed coping strategies offer to society and national disaster response strategies. In that way, a “best practice” for an integrative and inclusive disaster and crisis management can be identified and used to serve as a model for policy and decision makers.

If your organization would like to send a representative to this workshop, we are happy to cover the resulting expenses, including travels, accommodation and catering on the day of the workshop.

Draft agenda

WELCOMING and briefing on the workshop details by the organizing committee

SHORT INTRODUCTION of the participants

DISCUSSION of key questions in the format of an interactive “world café” in parallel sessions

SYNTHESIS SESSION with all participants

CONCLUSION Conclusive key note talk

Benefits for the participant

STRENGTHEN your group’s or the members of your organization’s ability to function in times of a crisis

ENHANCE the modes of communication between agencies and organizations during a crisis

LEARN ABOUT DIFFICULTIES and advantages of a European-wide interconnectedness of agencies

LEARN ABOUT POSSIBILITIES (and potential problems) of “smart” ways of communication and action

CONNECT with representatives of other groups and organizations and enhance collaboration
